

Raising attainment in primary science

Ofsted say that the most important role of teaching is to raise pupils' achievement.

We can help you to make your good lessons outstanding by investigating how to raise attainment in the classroom.

The course

Evaluate science in your school to help you to identify and fully understand current levels of attainment. Investigate teaching and learning strategies to help you turn good lessons into outstanding ones.

Outcomes

You'll develop an understanding of key issues relating to raising attainment. This will include discovering a range of activities to use in the classroom to support this and how to create a learning environment that meets children's needs.

"I was given valuable space and a forum for considering priorities and approaches to raising the profile and ultimately the attainment in science in my school. I was given approaches and activities which I could see fitting into our framework."

Angela Ellis, 2016 participant
